

State of the Pueblo Page Chancellor, President

Happy October!

It is hard to believe that it is already October, it sure does not feel like Fall. For those of you slowly coming back to the Pueblo, welcome home!

Warren Edminster's Mexican Lime tree has ripe limes. He is happy to share. Please call to arrange pick-up.

Our community has had a slow summer, which is great news compared to last year's storms and landscape issues. I know many neighbors will not be coming home until November, so it is still important to stay alert and keep an eye out for each other and our homes. If you see anything suspicious, please call the Sheriff and have it checked out.

Many of you have reached out about rentals, we do have a couple of open spots, and will re-open rental applications at the beginning of 2026. If you are interested, you should read our Rule 10 regarding rentals. Also, don't forget all of our Rules and Bylaws are located on our website.

We are working on a pool survey as we want to make sure that you have the ability to let us know where you think we should spend our Reserve funds. The pools are obviously areas where we spend the most money on a yearly basis. I expect that in the near future, we will send the survey out to you in a separate email for you to complete on-line.

Sadly, we said goodbye to a few of our neighbors over the summer months - Pamela Bangs, LouAnn Gerken, and Ronnie Marshall. They will be missed.

I hope to see you soon in the neighborhood!

Vice President Water Management Chair Nominating Committee Chair Deborah Perry

Note from the Nominating Committee ...

Hello to our year-round residents and a warm welcome to our returning snowbirds! I hope everyone enjoyed a happy and healthy summer.

The board resumed its monthly meetings in September. We are eager to address the needs and interests of our vibrant community.

As autumn settles in, we turn our attention to upcoming projects, new initiatives, and preparations for our annual meeting. We encourage all residents to stay involved and share any suggestions or concerns, as your input is invaluable to the success and harmony of our neighborhood.

As my term concludes at the end of this year, the Nominating Committee is seeking a new Vice President for 2026. We encourage you to consider stepping up for this role. Experience in board service is beneficial and the Vice President position can serve as valuable training for the role as President.

Contact me or any other board member to discuss this. Please remember that all board members and committee members are VOLUNTEERS. We welcome both full time and part-time residents to serve.

A big thank you to all who contribute their time and energy in many ways to Catalina Pueblo.

Volunteering and its Surprising Benefits

How Giving to Others Makes You Healthier & Happier

Part 1 of 4

With busy lives, it can be hard to find time to volunteer. However, the benefits of volunteering are enormous to you, your family, and your community. The right match can help you to reduce stress, find friends, reach out to the community, learn new skills, and even advance your career. Giving to others can also help protect your mental and physical health. Learn more about the many benefits of helping others and find tips on getting started.

Why volunteer?

Volunteering offers vital help to people in need, worthwhile causes, and the community, but the benefits can be even greater for you, the volunteer. Volunteering and helping others can help you reduce stress, combat depression, keep you mentally stimulated, and provide a sense of purpose. While it's true that the more you volunteer, the more benefits you'll experience, volunteering doesn't have to involve a long-term commitment or take a huge amount of time out of your busy day. Giving in even simple ways can help others those in need and improve your health and happiness.

Volunteering: The happiness effect

Helping others kindles happiness, as many studies have demonstrated. When researchers at the London School of Economics examined the relationship between volunteering and measures of happiness in a large group of American adults, they found the more people volunteered, the happier they were, according to a study in Social Science and Medicine. Compared with people who never volunteered, the odds of being "very happy" rose 7% among those who volunteer monthly and 12% for people who volunteer every two to four weeks. Among weekly volunteers, 16% felt very happy—a hike in happiness comparable to having an income of $75,000–$100,000 versus $20,000, say the researchers.

Benefits of volunteering: 4 ways to feel healthier and happier

Part 1. Volunteering connects you to others

Part 2. Volunteering is good for your mind and body

Part 3. Volunteering can advance your career

Part 4. Volunteering brings fun and fulfillment to your life

Benefit 1: Volunteering connects you to others

One of the better-known benefits of volunteering is the impact on the community. Volunteering allows you to connect to your community and make it a better place. Even helping out with the smallest tasks can make a real difference to the lives of people, animals, and organizations in need. And volunteering is a two-way street: It can benefit you and your family as much as the cause you choose to help. Dedicating your time as a volunteer helps you make new friends, expand your network, and boost your social skills.

Make New Friends

One of the best ways to make new friends and strengthen existing relationships is to commit to a shared activity together. Volunteering is a great way to meet new people, especially if you are new to an area. It strengthens your ties to the community and broadens your support network, exposing you to people with common interests, neighborhood resources, and fun and fulfilling activities.

Increase your social and relationship skills

While some people are naturally outgoing, others are shy and have a hard time meeting new people. Volunteering gives you the opportunity to practice and develop your social skills, since you are meeting regularly with a group of people with common interests. Once you have momentum, it's easier to branch out and make more friends and contacts.

Volunteering as a family

Children watch everything you do. By giving back to the community, you show them firsthand how volunteering makes a difference and how good it feels to help other people and animals and enact change. It's also a valuable way for you to get to know organizations in the community and find resources and activities for your children and family.

The Roots of our Landscape Rules

The Southwest, including Tucson, became a snowbird destination starting in the early 20th century. In Tucson's version, speculative developers combined assorted southwestern architectural styles with deliberate preservation of desert plantings on large lots to enhance appeal to buyers who wanted a decidedly Southwest feel for their winter homes.

In 1928, real estate entrepreneurs John and Helen Murphey purchased 7,000 acres of land in the Foothills; they worked with local Swiss-born architect Josias Joesler to develop the area in a style evocative of a Mexican town. There would be a core village at St. Philips, and scattered hacienda-style houses on a minimum of four acre lots. Roads carefully followed the foothills landscape, houses were located to take advantages of views, and as much of the natural landscape as possible was preserved. Typically, a postage-stamp area was cleared for a house and patio, with native plants sweeping right up to the wall. Depression and war notwithstanding, America's post-war prosperity and love affair with the automobile enabled success, even though far from the railroad station and airport.

developments. Natural flow of washes was preserved. Where retaining walls were necessary, they were built of rock found here on site, as were the cobbles used for curbs. Streets follow the natural undulations of the landscape, and each is subtly curved; you cannot see from one end to the other end of any of our streets. Workers were not allowed to drive vehicles randomly across the site lest it damage the native vegetation.

Houses, built in a style that continued and honored Joesler's, were sited to preserve the landscape and native vegetation. Some houses were stepped up on higher foundations to preserve and adapt to a slope. Many were sited forward or backward from the streets, expressly to preserve existing desert flora at the front or back of lots, particularly palo verde trees and saguaros. Some large saguaros were transplanted, others carefully wrapped to prevent abrasion during construction. House materials and paint colors were chosen to blend with the landscape. Even driveways were made of plain dirt or brushed concrete, pebbled aggregate or graveled tarmac expressly to blend with the natural environment.

A view up Adelita that shows that even a straight street is subtly curved, and the preservation of existing native plants enriched with other desert and dry climate plants.

From the beginning, the Maxon brothers wrote their intended preservation of landscape into the CC&Rs, and the Rules follow, refine, and adapt to that intention. For example, section 8.1.4 of the CC&Rs requires review and approval of any major changes in landscape "including but not limited to the planting or removal of trees, removal of specimen cacti or shrubs; the use of decorative boulders, stones and rock ground cover; and the installation of walls or berms."

Our Rules repeat these, for example 2.2.4. forbid tinted colored paving, 2.4.2. limits groundcovers and ornamental rocks to shades that match the native soil. Accent colors (see Rules 2.2.2.2.) were added in keeping with the goal of colors that blend with the environment.

At 2.4.1, the rules limit new plantings outside patio walls to "either desert, desert-adapted or drought-tolerant". As our native plants age out and need to be replaced, we encourage replacement with local foothills species, but in the face of an ever-warmer and drier climate your committee broadly interprets these limitations as any plant from any desert in the world that is not invasive or highly allergenic. This is to maintain, preserve and adapt the Maxon's and Murphey's intent to preserve the foothills environment as much as possible.

In 1970, Tucson builders and contractors Don and Norman Maxon began construction of our own neighborhood of patio homes, and worked with Art Tessi of Blanton & Co on site development. They were all interviewed by the Arizona Sun, and in an article of Sunday, March 3, 1974, they describe their approach to the landscape. The stated goal was not to disturb the topography or the vegetation or wildlife, clearly following the long-established Murphey vision.

From the interviews, we learn that the site was not bladed into a smooth flat plane, as had become the practice for other denser

As autumn approaches, we begin to feel like entertaining again... with the advent of cooler temperatures and the return of all our neighbors. This pâté (terrine) was a recipe from my mother's French side. It is simple to make, and wonderful for a crowd. She would also serve it as a first course — a slice on a plate with crackers, a dollop of Dijon Mustard, and a few sliced cornichons.

Terrine of Chicken Liver and Sausage

1 1/2 pounds chicken livers, trimmed
1 pound sausage meat
1 teaspoon salt
3 eggs
1/2 teaspoon allspice
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground pepper

1/2 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoon butter
1/4 cup dry or sweet sherry
2 tablespoons cognac
1/2 cup heavy cream
1/4 pound bacon—thinly sliced

Blend first five ingredients in food processor until smooth. Sauté onion in butter until soft. Add sherry and cognac; flambé. Add cream and then add this mixture to the liver/sausage in the processor. Process until completely blended. Preheat oven to 400°F. While oven is preheating, line a bread pan bottom and sides with bacon. Pour mixture into pan and cover with bacon. Bake in bain marie for 1 1/2 hours. Serve chilled with water crackers, Dijon mustard, and cornichons.

This recipe, and many more, can be found on David's blog.

Treasurer Report

Jake Hurwitz, Treasurer

As of August 31, 2025, CPA revenues tracked ahead of Budget while expenses have run below Budget, creating a favorable variance as we head into the final months of 2025. Interest Income on invested Capital Reserves has been added to the our monthly financial statement as this amount has become a significant source of revenue to the CPA. Moreover, anticipated legal, water management and utility expenses are coming in notably below budget. On the other hand, Federal and State income taxes paid on 2024 interest earned were an expense for which we had not budgeted and created a negative variance. Future Budgets will reflect these cash flows accordingly. The CPA Capital Reserve at month-end was approximately $169,000.
