

State of the Pueblo

Jean Paine, President

The Board wishes everyone a Happy New Year. One thing we can be glad about is the status of our community. Not only does the Pueblo look great, it is also financially strong.

This last year the Board, under the guidance of Pat Wagner and her Landscape and Architecture committee, Jo Ann Marcus, Mark Sammons and Jude Trang, has seen the clean up of our washes and pathways.

The rules governing rental properties have been strengthened and procedures adopted when the number of rentals in the community drops below 10 percent.

In addition we now have clear and concise rules governing garage conversions. Many thanks to the committee, Frank Bangs, Warren Edminster, Dan Farrell, Jo Ann Marcus, Mark Sammons, Carol Sinclair, Joe Thompson, John Trang, Pat Wagner for their hardwork and commitment to these much needed guidelines.

Hopefully you have noticed the new Catalina Pueblo signs that replaced the very old and falling down signs at each entrance; Pueblo, Posada, Minera, Adelita and Caballo. Also some of the sun browned signs at the pools have been replaced.

There are a few things you need to be aware of in preparation for the Annual Meeting. Your packet will contain a ballot to vote on a few clarification to the bylaws and to bring them up to date due to changes in Arizona law. Also at the Annual Meeting last year it was suggested that the bylaws should reflect current banking practices regarding all monies paid out or disbursed by our treasurer.

Under the chairmanship of Dan Peters a committee met to draw up proposed changes. Fortunately for us, Dan who has worked on bylaw changes previously, Bill Strang and Jo Ann Marcus have made the necessary proposed changes. If the proposed changes are approved by the community, Dan Peters and Frank Bangs will complete the process by filing them with the state.

Pools Chairman

John Trang

2015 has been another busy year for the Pool Committee and HOA Board in caring for our pools. Again, I would like to acknowledge and thank the Pool Committee and all of you who have helped maintain our wonderful community assets.

In early 2016 you will notice that recycle containers will be placed at all three of our pools. Our Patio Pools service man, Alan Hagelstrom, has been collecting glass, aluminum, and #1 plastic in support of XANGO Goodness Foundation partners with Americares to provide XANGO meal packs to starving children around the world – and he has asked us if we would be willing to help. He has called his project #recycleforxangomealpacks (see Facebook) and he will deliver all of our donated recycling materials. The HOA Board feels this is a very worthy cause and encourages you to participate. We will collect materials on Mondays and Fridays.

In 2015 we budgeted for the resurfacing of the Adelita Pool deck. As we got into the project and met with four different pool companies, we were advised by all of them that this was a much bigger project than originally anticipated. They all said simply patching and resurfacing the pool decking as originally planned would not give us the best long-term results. Given the high year round use of the pool and considering the very poor condition of the Adelita pool surface, tile, and decking; the Board decided to take the time to thoroughly research what is needed for a complete rehabilitation of the pool.

Spotlight on a Neighbor - Marti Greason

Pat Weigand

Some of us have interesting stories about our childhood. Some of us have interesting stories about our adulthood. Some have stories that can't be revealed. Others have grown up in such normalcy that they feel somehow cheated.

Martha (Marti) Greason definitely does not fit into the last category.

Marti grew up in Carlisle, a farming community in Pennsylvania, where she attended class in a one-room schoolhouse. One teacher taught grades 1 through 8, with an enrollment of about 30. (It is unclear at this writing whether the Teacher has since been canonized as a Saint, or committed to an insane asylum.)

The schoolhouse had no running water, no indoor plumbing, and a heater that required refills from the outdoor coal shed. Marti attended this school for 6 years with the same schoolmates, after which she took a leap into a modern facility and completed her education. Thereafter, she and her Sister moved to Washington, D.C., and she began working for the U.S. Government as a Statistical Clerk. This location allowed her to be exposed to a number of memorable events, including frequent sightings of President Kennedy at parades and outdoor venues.

While Marti was in D.C., her Brother was in Germany with the Military. When he returned to the US, our brave 19 year-old and her Sibling made a sign for their car that read "Arizona or Bust" and drove off to Phoenix. They also discovered the Tucson area, which they really liked. As it turned out, however, Marti's boss from D.C. gave her an interagency referral to Los Angeles and Las Vegas. She chose the latter, left Arizona, and became an Office of Personnel Management Investigator's Aide in Las Vegas, somewhat influenced by a government car being part of the package. The job was one that required interaction with Atomic Energy Commission personnel during the very active years of that agency.

A few years later, she returned to D.C. in a position with the Department of the Army. She met the man she would marry. He went off to Viet Nam, and she went to Penn State to pursue a degree in English. They had two children: Bruce, who now lives in Phoenix, and Becky, who lives in Maryland. During their 14 years of marriage, Marti stayed at home with the children for 10 years to provide a stable environment, after which she returned to government service. This service included working for US Immigration in D.C., Border Patrol in Laredo, Texas, and back to the Immigration Service in Miami, Florida.

It was at this time in Miami that Marti renewed her interest in the outdoors, which began early on with her parents, who enjoyed camping, and Girl Scouting activity with her Mother and Sisters. She signed up for some local weekend trips with the Sierra Club. In short order, the Sierra Club Guides realized that our girl had skills. She could put up a tent, among other things, so she was recruited. Thus, for the past 12 years or so, Marti has been leading Sierra Club trips all over the world. She has guided explorers on backpacking trips through Europe, Asia, Africa, and the US, at the rate of 6-8 trips per year. Her trip involvement is not just guiding the travelers. It includes selecting the trip location, scheduling the dates, preparing advertisements, screening the participants, and contracting with concessionaires.

Eventually, she retired from her position as a US Immigration Officer based in Miami, a location she loved dearly. She lived in 17 different States over the course of her life, but even so, the thought of moving back to Arizona was always lurking... Acting on this thought, she visited Tucson again to see what housing might be available. As luck would have it, nothing was. Back in Florida, she began exploring real estate on the internet. She found a property for sale in The Catalina Pueblo, which she knew about and really liked. So, even though she had not seen the interior of any houses, she bought her home online, sight unseen. (Yikes! Talk about nerve !)

Marti continues to guide Sierra Club trips, most recently in Botswana, although she would like to cut back a little on the number per year. In her "spare time," she is a docent at Tonono Chul Park.

The sweet sides of her life include two grandchildren and a cat who loves football on TV. You will just have to ask her about that...

INVASIVE ORNAMENTAL GRASSES ON THE MARCH IN CATALINA PUEBLO

During a recent stroll through some neighborhood washes, Jeff Soder, a Master Gardener intern and new recruit for the Landscape and Architecture Committee, spotted clumps of what he thought might be the dreaded buffelgrass, an invasive species of bunch grass that crowds out native annuals and can become a fire hazard. Large stretches of Sonora and now parts of southern Arizona have been transformed from their original desert landscapes to buffelgrass wastelands. Buffelgrass (Pennisetum ciliare) looks quite similar to its relative, fountain grass (Pennisetum setaceum), and it can be difficult to tell them apart. Jeff now plans to seek an expert's help with the identification.

But it hardly matters which type of ornamental grass it turns out to be. Fountain grass, long used as an ornamental landscape plant and introduced in Tucson in 1940, is now also considered an invader. Like buffelgrass, it has seedheads which produce great quantities of seeds so that the plant spreads rapidly. According to the Desert Museum publication called Invaders of the Sonoran Desert Region, fountain grass also aggressively competes with native species, provides lots of fuel, and is well adapted to fire.

The Catalina Pueblo wash running south from Pueblo to Minera harbors a major infestation. In the northern stretch of that area, where the accompanying photos were taken, clumps of grass have taken over the stone-lined bank on the west side of the wash and have spread to the path above and across to the east side. A year or two ago there were just a few large clumps; now they are all over the place.

The owners of the homes adjacent to that part of the wash will be notified that they are responsible for removing the invading grass. Other Catalina Pueblo owners with fountain grass on their property – even if it does not seem to be spreading – should give serious thought to getting rid of it.

Peter Warren, who writes the Garden Sage column in the Arizona Star, devoted part of a recent column to the subject of fountain grass. “When it was first introduced,” he wrote, “it was thought to be just another pretty grass for medians and landscapes,” but it is actually “a noxious weed in dry areas like ours.” He recommended removing it.

Mechanical control includes pulling up or digging up the plants, a method suited to small infestations or clumps. Because rhizomes and roots are left behind, the cleaned-out area will have to be watched and the task repeated until the root system is exhausted.

Herbicides will work when the plants are more than 50 percent green. This happens during monsoon season, although at our elevation they can turn green and flower after almost any rain. Most of the clumps in the Pueblo wash were bright green in mid-December. Contact herbicides such as Reward and Scythe kill only the part of the plant they touch, so they are not very effective on perennial plants with deep root systems. They must be applied repeatedly. Systemic herbicides such as Roundup-Pro and Finale, on the other hand, are absorbed by the plant and carried throughout its system, killing it. They are slower acting but more effective.

Herbicides damage every plant they touch, so should be accurately targeted and used carefully on a windless day. The most effective one for invasive grasses is glyphosate (Roundup-Pro,) which is listed by the World Health Organization as “probably carcinogenic.” Wear a mask if you use it, and tell the neighbors to close their windows.

To end on a more positive note, it is possible to enjoy the sight of plants with gracefully arching long stems without risking a fountain grass takeover. The solution: choose a native grass that resembles fountain grass but is not invasive. Here are some possibilities:

Bull grass (Muhlenbergia emersleyi) and deer grass (Muhlenbergia rigens) both have seed stalks that can reach five feet; Arizona cotton top (Digitaria californica), which can reach three feet; and Blue Grama (Bouteloua gracilis), with blue-green leaves and 18-inch stalks.

Parsley Parmesan Chicken

If you don't want to use bottled dressings (I never do), you can easily make your own Italian dressing.

5 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil

2 tablespoons red wine vinegar

1 teaspoon sugar

1 teaspoon sweet paprika

½ teaspoon dried basil

¼ teaspoon dried oregano

salt and pepper to taste

Place all ingredients in a small jar and shake until emulsified, or place the ingredients in a small bowl and whisk until emulsified.

4 boneless chicken breast halves
½ cup Italian salad dressing
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons water
⅓ cup unseasoned bread crumbs
½ cup Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
½ teaspoon paprika
salt and pepper

Pour salad dressing into a baking dish. Add chicken turning to coat on all sides. Cover and refrigerate 4-8 hours, occasionally tilting dish and spooning dressing over chicken. Drain, reserving dressing. Combine egg and water. In plastic bag combine cheese, crumbs, parsley, paprika, salt and pepper. Dip chicken in egg and then shake a few pieces at a time in bread crumb mixture. Return to baking dish and spoon reserved marinade (or more) on top. Bake at 350°F for 45-50 minutes or until tender. Serves 4.

Artichokes

If you are getting a late start on dressing up your garden for winter, consider planting an artichoke or two. Good-sized ones are available at larger garden centers. Their silver color and jagged arched leaves add an unusual accent. If potted in pairs by a gate, path or door, they lend an improbably formal touch. If you don't cut and eat the globe-shaped flower buds, they open into immense lavender colored thistle blossoms.

January Garden Chores:

Cover cold-sensitive plants when frost is forecast.

Plants may remain covered for several days.

Harvest citrus as it ripens. Water wildflower seedlings weekly.

Thin wildflower seedlings as needed.

It's not too late to pot up cyclamen, dianthus, calendula, alyssum, pansies, violas, snapdragon, stock, and poppies.

Continue to plant cool weather vegetables like lettuce, spinach, Swiss chard, cabbage, carrots, and radishes.

It is okay to prune obviously dead or malformed limbs.

Remove mistletoe from trees.

Rake and remove plant litter from entire property.

Keep irrigation on a 10- or 14-day schedule; less if rains are good.

Irrigate trees deeply every 2 or 4 weeks.

Artichokes (Cynara cardunculus var. scolymus), are a naturally-occurring variety of cardoons, native to the Mediterranean, and were used in the kitchens of the ancient Greeks and Romans. Our name "artichoke" is derived from Arabic, Ardhi Shawki. Improved strains of the plant were developed in Arab Spain in the late middle ages, whence they and the Arabic name were disseminated to Italy and France.

Plant in deep, fertile, well-drained soil. They don't love alkalinity. Plant in a large and deep pot with commercial potting soil, or amend native soil with compost. Keep them moist but not soggy.

They are cool-weather plants, but cover them on frosty nights using a stake to lift the cover above the growth bud. If planted in the ground, they will eventually go dormant in summer and re-sprout in autumn. Because of this, if potted in a prominent place, you may prefer to treat them as annuals, and discard or replace them when hot weather arrives. If you cut (and eat!) the terminal flower bud, the plant will produce smaller side buds.

Congratulations Terry Temple

Terry Temple's photo (above) titled "A Moment in the Catalinas . . . Stop every now and then. Just stop and enjoy. Take a deep breath. Relax and take in the abundance of life." was named one of The best Arizona photos of 2015 by AZ 365.

AZ 365 says of Terry's photo "An only-in-Arizona moment: snow on saguaros. Terry Temple of Tucson captured this scene in the foothills of the Catalina Mountains near Tucson."

Terry says, "I am in awe of the beauty of snow covering the desert plants, especially the awesome giants." Terry took this photo last February while hiking Finger Rock trail just before sunset.

Congratulations Terry. This is a big and well deserved honor!

Message from . . . Bob and Ursula Garrett

Sincere apologies are extended to our neighbors who were annoyed by workers from the Andersen Windows company who, while doing an installation for us, spent some of their time soliciting new business without either our knowledge or consent. We learned about this unacceptable violation of Pueblo rules only the next day, and have complained to the company in the strongest terms. On top of that, Andersen did a dreadful job overall...yet another reason to not recommend them.
